THE civil service commissioners will probably obey orders when officially promulgated, but they will not act on hints conveyed in newspaper interviews.

NEXT to treason there is no offense more reprehensible in the opinion of the organs than that of a Democratic congressman who asks that a Republican placeholder may be retained.

For heading a revolt occasioned by admitted oppression and injustice in various forms Louis Riel was put to death yesterday by the government whose maladministration occasioned the uprising. A greater blunder has not been committed by the government of any enlightened nation for many years.

Ir is hoped that the forty-ninth Congress will make a speedy and final decision as to the unfinished double-turreted monitors. If they are to be finished let the work go on. If they are not to be completed they should be broken up. There has been enough of delay, and quite too much of wrangling about these vessels.

THE assertion of the Critic that uncer tainty in relation to the civil service law has been injurious to business in Washington is not creditable to the administration or the party behind it. The administration is bound, not only by official oaths, but by voluntary pledges, to faithfully enforce the law. Whence comes the doubt?

It is mighty mean for some of those Den ocratic "statesmen" who were permitted to put their political and personal friends and dependents into the departments under several successive Republican administrations to be going round hunting down Republican messengers and watchmen and getting them turned out. Such ingratitude shocks one's confidence in human nature.

THE New York Herald thinks "the suc cess of the Irish home rule party is so near that it would be far better for Englishmen to accept the inevitable with a good grace. They would find more profit in compromise than in defeat." This is a good suggestion, but such advice will do no good. Home rule will not be conceded until it can be deferred no longer. That time is not far Ir the Democratic party has become con vinced that it has no chance to hold on to the government beyond the present presidential term, it may be good policy to murder the civil service law and thereby remove all impediments to a wholesale grab. But if that party would still cherish a hope of retaining power-with the south held in solidity by suppression of the ballotit will do no violence to that statute, either by direction or indirection.

THE king of Burmah, Theebaw, caused the present trouble between his own land and Great Britain by imposing exorbitant taxation on the British Bombay and Burmah Trading Company, which has a lease for working the teak and other Burmah forests. The Balkan War. The Servious lack anything like a justifiation for the war which they have opened Bulgaria. They have had no provocation at all, nor can their apologists frame decent excuse for the invasion of their neighbor's territory. Not even our war on Mexico, thirty odd years ago, was more palpably violative of all the rules that norally govern the intercourse of nations. It is probable that King Milan is acting against the dictates of his own sober judgment, being swept along by the tide of popular feeling. He was reported, some ime ago, to have said that he must either cad the fight or lose his crown. He found It impossible to retain his hold on the respeet and confidence of his people without at least appearing to be in full sympathy with their fighting mania.

The case of Louis Napoleon in h's last military undertaking illustrated on a grand scale what King Milan's predicament shows in miniature. Napoleon's military prestige having been destroyed by the miserable failure of his Mexican scheme; the empire that he had set up in the new world having collapsed; his poor dupe, Maximilian, hav-ing been executed, and the French army withdrawn in something akin to disgrace, the French emperor felt that something nust be done to astonish the world with display of military prowess. Sedan and the abdication were the result. In trying to fasten his crown more securely on his head he lost it. King Milan may fare as "Neitherlong nor bloody," is what the Servian minister in London said of the war last Saturday while the Servian columns were on the march into Bulgaria. Why not long? And what reason is there to suppose it will not be bloody? If left to ght it out between themselves, the Servians and Bulgarians are not likely to make speedy end of it. The Servians know to fight, as the Turks learned long They have a record for great courage and steady persistence. The Bulgarians are not cowards, and although the united forces of Bulgaria and Eastern Roumelia are, at present, not equal to the Servian army, it must be remem-bered that the former are fighting on their own soil, defending their own homes But it is altogether improbable that these forces will be permitted to fight without interference from other and stronger powers. Russia and Austria will probabl feel impelled to move in the interests of peace! Still, so many are the complication and so intricate and delicate the various international questions involved that a gen eral European war may result from the little fire that has burst into flame in the Balkan peninsula.

South American Mails.

Mr. Bell, superfutendent of foreign mails, has made a very decided improvement in the service between the United States and Brazil, Argentine Republic, and other countries on the east coast of South America. He has arranged to have a South American mail made up at Newport News for each of the United States and Brazil Steamship Company's steamships, Heretofore all mail matter for these cour tries from Washington and points south had to be sent north to New York, some hundreds of miles out of the direct route. Under the new avrangement it will, if marked "Via Newport News," avoid this roundabout route and save from one to three days.

The new superintendent of foreign mail service has shown, not only in this but in other important details of his office, a very clear and comprehensive appreciation of the value of time. He is inclined to be decidedly and intelligently progressive. It is boped that this indicates a new departure for the Postoffice Department in the manageat of our foreign mail service

A WASHINGTON telegram to the Boston ournal quotes a prominent official as saying that "the President has the most ac curate knowledge of the civil service law and rules; that he quotes from memory, and refers to sections and articles by their num bers; that he will be the head of the civil service commission; that he has construed the law for himself, and has instructed the vice." All this being true the President's mind must be deeply impressed with the fact that the great central idea of the law is to secure non-partisan service by honest competition.

The English parliamentary campaign is remarkable for nothing so much as for its dense stupidity. There is not a single is-sue between the two great parties that is clearly drawn. The Irish nationalists constitute the only party that has a clear understanding as to what it means,

ALREADY the new civil service commis sioners have lost favor in the eyes of administration organs, because they stated that the President's course in ordering a pass instead of a competitive examination at the Breoklyn custom house should not be a precedent.

THE NEW NATIONAL THEATER. "Shadows of a Great City" was presented last night to a very appreciative audience at the National Theater. This melodrame the National Abeater. This melourams abounds in dramatic situations, is splendidly mounted, and the actors are all well fitted for their respective characters. Miss Edna Caregin the dual role of Annie Standish, a poor woman, and Helen Standish, her daughter, in the dual role of Annie Standish, a poor woman, and Helen Standish, her dangiter, runders the characters very acceptably, while Miss Annie Ward Tiffuny, as Biddy Ronan, is infinitiable in her role. Tom Cooper, the hero of the play, is most efficiently presented by Mr. Nelson Wheateroff. Mr. W. W. Allen sa Ade Nathans, a pawhiroker, gave a capital piece of character setting. Mr. H. W. Herman had the unenvisible part of the villain, but took it with manly dignity. Mr. George R. Edesan, as Jim Farren, makes his role one of the features of the play by the very effective manner int which he renders it. The seenery is especially fine, and the prison and river seene of Bankwell's island was particularly good. All lovers of melodrams find in this play the requisite sensations and dramatic surprises. The interest is sustained to the end, and the dramatic unities are observed. The play will be presented every eventing during the week, with Saturday matinee.

ALRACGU'S GRAND OPERA HOUSE.

The world renowned Hanion brothers grand spectacular fatry production, "Fantasma," received its initial presentation last evening at Albaugh's trand Opera House. The plan of the entertainment is to present a number of marvelous and startling scenes and situations, and success has attended the endeavors of the stage managers and machinist. It is ever the unexpected that happens. Into this phantamajoria of pictures of possible and impossible things is introduced a liftle love story that flads is happy ultimatum in the second act, when the lovers are restored to each other's arms. There must have been dissentions in the family afterward, as the bride seems to I ave joined the corps de ballet. There is a wicked devil and his emissaries, and a good faily and her attendanis. The latter conquers the former, who steals away Lena, for leve of her, and restores her to her faith arithm. The king of Hades, Zamallel, and Fantasma, the fairy queen, are the only speaking parts in the cast, all the other characters convey their meaning by pantomime, a feature of the play much in its favor, as it enables the scenic effects to move rapidly. There are nechanical bears, squirrels, goblina, cows, cwis, and ghosts, there are demon bells, infernatinges, possessed bedsteads, and fiendish truits. A scene in Canada suggested to an additor that the petrot who timbled and beauced through all the scenes and situations was a probable bank cashier. This suggestion of winter led easily to the grand tables, and fiendish truits. A scene in Canada suggested to an indicor that the petrot who timbled and beauced through all the scenes and situations was a probable bank cashier. This suggestion of winter led easily to the grand tables, sind little Aimer, syvers old, scored the hit of the evening in her character song. She is a tiny bloode, of perfect ingine, and diatuy mold, with all the esprit and tact and -hie of an accomplished prosessiona the rapid succession of seemes and events, and be very imputal turns and antice of things in teneral give a plequatey to this play that is ap-cordiated. "Fainteams" continues at Albaugh's or the week, with Wednesday and Saturday

At Herzog's last night was performed "The Strunglers of Paris," an intense inelo-draina, it is in seven acts to these are appended thirty episodes. This melo-draina may be thus summed: both its merits and delects are great. The letter consists, first, of the stranglings, a good and venerable man, Capt. Guerin, being the earliest victim, and his beauliful daughter, Jeanne, the next, and, fortunately, the last. These unpleasant deeds are executed in the presence of the audience. Before had they been unseen, and left to the imagination, as to the acting it was well done in every part. The scenary was appropriate, and especially that in the escape of Jagoti and Biancianri on the sea. Altogether the draina is interesting, and with some pruning will be acceptable to intelligent audiences.

THE DIME MUSEUM.

Last night at the Dime Museum fully prove that "Jesso James" could assemble a multitud of friends. Indeed, all of them could not enter the house. Those who were in certainly en joyed the drama, wild as it is and sometime improbable. But the majority rules in the country, and the "Dime" is the especial tempts of the majority. The well-trained acting of the horse Charger was also received with high layer.
